Age-related changes in drug disposition and pharmacological responses to phenytoin. The effects of aging on the pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, and disposition of phenytoin were examined in two groups of healthy elderly volunteers (age 65-74 and age 75-87 yr). The pharmacokinetics of phenytoin were measured after a single oral dose of 15 mg/kg in both groups. The free (unbound) fraction of phenytoin increased from 0.33 +/- 0.04 in the young to 0.48 +/- 0.05 in the old. Both the area under the plasma concentration-time curve (AUC) and the peak plasma concentration (C_{max}) of phenytoin increased with age. The maximal steady-state plasma concentration (C_{ss}) was 1.6 times higher and the steady-state volume of distribution (V_{ss}) was 2.6 times higher in the elderly group compared with the younger group. Despite the change in the free (unbound) fraction of phenytoin, the clearance of the drug from the body was unchanged with age. A high correlation between the free (unbound) fraction of phenytoin and the pharmacokinetic variables was demonstrated in both age groups. The half-life of phenytoin was prolonged by 2.1 times in the old compared with the young. Other pharmacodynamic variables, including the duration of clinical effects and the area under the clinical effect-time curve, increased with age. The effect of age on the disposition of phenytoin in humans was similar to that observed in rats.

Washington — Tennessee head coach Jeremy Pruitt had a message for Derek Barnett after Barnett made the list of 10 finalists for the 2018 Ted Hendricks Award, presented annually to the nation's best defensive end. Barnett collected 24 tackles and two sacks last season for the Vols. He wasn't the only SEC player on the list. Alabama's Quinnen Williams also made the list, along with guys from Clemson, Michigan, Texas and Wisconsin. Tennessee's run defense was pretty good last season. The Vols allowed only 192.4 rushing yards per game, which was 12th in the country and fourth in the SEC. Here's a look at the four finalists for the Ted Hendricks Award: — Derek Barnett, Tennessee: 24 tackles, 2.5 sacks — Quinnen
