They have a many to many relationship. A core can have many profiles, and a profile can belong to many cores. In addition to the fields on the Core entity being populated from core_fields_data() (label, status etc), I need the Core to auto-populate other fields on the profile when it is created, such as, the core_id: Score_id = isset($data['core_id']) ? $data['core_id'] : ''; $form['base_info']['core_id'] = array( '#type' => 'hidden', '#value' => Score_id ); I have discovered core_profiles_bulk_update() which does make the many-to-many auto populate of core_id, but this does not pre-populate profile fields. Is there any solution to auto-populate fields on the profile entity without having to edit the profile mode!? A: One way is to use hook_entity_insert(). For example, if you wanted to set a particular field value on the profile entity, you could use this code. `/ * Implements hook_entity_insert(). */ function MYMODULE_entity_insert(EntityInterface $entity) { // check if the newly inserted entity is a profile entity if ($entity instanceof ProfileInterface) { // set the entity field value`
