The induced fusion protein activates the transcription of several circadian genes including Ci-Ebox ([@B6]). Considering that cyclin D1 is known to activate the transcription of E-Box ([@B22]), and that both proteins form a complex with REV-ERB α , we can hypothesize that part of the mechanism of the overexpression of Ci-Ebox may be due to the overexpression of E-Box together with cyclin D1.

Therefore, cyclin D1 has a role in the control of circadian rhythms and circadian output, acting both at the transcriptional and post-transcriptional level. Author Contributions
