Q: Finding if a string exist in a file I'm a beginner C programmer. I have a program that takes a lot of input. Sometimes it can be wrong input, so I need to use it's error checking. If it has an error, the program should create a file with the same name, check if the input exists in the file. Does any one have an example of how to do this?

A:

ifstream file("myfile.txt"); // open the file
if(!file.is_open()) { // if not open // error handling } file.peek(); // see if it has data in the file while(!file.eof()) { // as long as it has data file

A. Technical Field The present invention relates to a handling mechanism for an object to be handled, in particular to a handling mechanism for handling an object (an electronic component such as an LSI chip) that is being assembled on a mounting board of a device (for example, a printer). B. Background Art An electronic component is provided with an elastic connector (a so-called “elastic contact”) that comes into contact with a mounting board for an electronic component provided with a plurality of terminals for receiving an electrical connection. An elastic contact is generally used for mounting an electronic component. For example, a technique is known that brings a metal contact of an electronic component into contact with terminals of a mounting board by a pushing operation of the metal contact (for example, see Patent Document 1). Patent Document 1: Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open (kokai) No. H9-88345 Meanwhile, it is necessary to bring the metal contact into contact with the terminals with a higher degree of accuracy in recent years because of an increase in the degree of integration and miniaturization of an electronic component. As a method for bringing a metal contact into contact with terminals with a higher degree of accuracy, for example, there is a method that electrically connects terminals and a metal contact by a pressing operation of the terminals and the metal contact in a non-conducting state and pushes the metal contact against the terminals. This method is effective in that, when connecting the metal contact and the terminals, there is no need to insert the metal contact into holes formed in the terminals. However, when this method is used for an electronic component that is being handled, a connector that holds the electronic component is brought into contact with a device such as a printer. Therefore, the electronic component is mounted in a tilted state on the mounting board, and terminals and a metal contact of the electronic component are also tilted. Accordingly, when the connector is pushed, a metal contact of the electronic component may not easily come into contact with the terminals.
