Juana de Ibarbourou Juana de Ibarbourou (; also called "Joana the Judge"; ca. 1365 – ca. 1435) was a Castilian judge, called the "Queen of the Jews", who served in the Supreme Court of Seville (the Council of the Kingdom). She is best known for her opinions in the cases of the judaica and the judaica of Toledo. Biography Juana de Ibarbourou is said to have been the daughter of Alfonso De Estrada, who was one of the leaders of the Judaic fraternity of 1385. At an early age she married Alfonso de Ochoa, one of the members of this brotherhood, and became the mother of six children, four of whom survived. When her husband died, Juana de Ibarbourou, already a woman of legal acumen, showed interest in all legal cases relating to the Judaic brotherhood. In 1391, shortly after her husband's death, she was appointed to a Council of the Kingdom, the only female to hold such a high position. Juana de Ibarbourou took this position with the approval of Philip
