Q: Basic ring-based (set) algebra. Does this work? I am trying to figure out a basic algebraic concept in ring-based sets. I have a set  $X$  with a ring operation  $(X, \otimes)$ . The operations are defined as follows: For all  $x, y, z \in X$ ,  $x \otimes (y \otimes z) = (x \otimes y) \otimes z$   $x \otimes 1 = x$   $1 \otimes x = x$   $1 \otimes 1 = 1$  I am having a difficult time showing associativity. Here is my attempt: Associativity:
$$(x \otimes y) \otimes z = x \otimes (y \otimes z) \\ = (x \otimes y) \otimes z = x \otimes (y \otimes z)$$
 This is where I am stuck. Does this work? Or am I off in a totally different direction? Any help would be appreciated. A: This kind of proof does work. There is nothing wrong with it. "I think that the reason I feel very uncomfortable with asexuality is due to the fact that asexuality is such a minority issue," Tan, a 21-year-old undergraduate student at a private university in Singapore, told BuzzFeed. "As it is a smaller community, I feel like there's not a lot of people who relate to it, or understand it." "Asexuality is defined as not having sexual attraction to
