Just ask Andy Casner. He was in the San Diego, Calif. bathroom with his wife and two friends when one of his companions said something about the blonde woman in a pink sweater in the mirror. Casner can't recall exactly what was said, but he recalls his first instinct being to rip his friend's head off. Casner, 28, has been with his wife for five years. They have a 2-year-old daughter and live in San Diego, but the couple frequently vacations in Fort Lauderdale. Casner says he's no stranger to the women of the beach. "I've been to Florida before and I've just got to say, Florida is a different state," says Casner. "I would say Fort Lauderdale has the greatest amount of single women in the United States." Not wanting to cause a scene, he approached the woman in the mirror instead. "I just said, 'That's pretty,' and she said, 'Do you know who I am?' and I said no."
