AutoCAD [Win/Mac] (Updated 2022)

While AutoCAD is available for Windows, macOS, and Linux operating systems, the most popular version is AutoCAD LT, which requires Microsoft Windows. There are also versions of AutoCAD for mobile devices. An AutoCAD LT subscription is necessary to use AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT. A free AutoCAD trial is available, but not for AutoCAD LT. The trial version of AutoCAD provides access to all AutoCAD functionalities, but not to AutoCAD LT functionalities. A multi-user (or network) license is also needed for the use of AutoCAD. AutoCAD LT subscriptions can be purchased as a single-user license, or a multi-user license. There are AutoCAD LT products available for educational use, including versions of AutoCAD LT for universities, vocational schools, and schools. The subscription version of AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT can be purchased online or downloaded from Autodesk online store. A free trial version of AutoCAD is available, but it is only available for Windows. An AutoCAD LT trial version is not available. The following sections provide an overview of Autodesk products and how to use AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT. For detailed information, see the online help. Introduction to AutoCAD AutoCAD LT is a version of AutoCAD for use on Microsoft Windows platforms. The official Autodesk website has a description of the differences between AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT. Where Is AutoCAD? AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT are available from the Autodesk website, as well as from some online stores. In addition to the desktop versions, AutoCAD mobile apps and web apps are available. These applications are optimized for touchscreens. On iOS, the application is called Autodesk DWG Mobile, and on Android it is AutoCAD Mobile. Types of AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT products There are three categories of Autodesk products that are available: Single-user license: A single-user license is required to use only one copy of AutoCAD or AutoCAD LT. Multi-user license: A multi-user license is required for AutoCAD or AutoCAD LT that can be used by multiple users in a network. Network license: A
