Effects of vagal stimulation on striatal dopamine efflux in freely moving rats. We used intracellular dialysis to study the effects of vagal stimulation on the efflux of dopamine from striatal nerve terminals in freely moving rats. Vagal stimulation evoked a significant increase in dopamine efflux. This response was blocked by tetrodotoxin and eliminated by naloxone. There was a good correlation between the duration of the sensory stimulation and the increase in dopamine efflux. These results indicate that the vagus nerve can directly modulate striatal dopamine synthesis and release.

A rabid Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon is pillorying the US for being half-hearted in protecting its new ally, the budding Palestinian authority. AIPAC, the America-Israel Political Action Committee, has said if the Palestinians can't deliver peace with Israel then they're not for peace. That might come from "A-rab Jewry" in the words of the Israelis. AIPAC, a Zionist lobby group - and that's putting it kindly - yesterday spoke out against the UN's recognition of the Palestinians, saying they would never settle for a half-hearted peace and would go to war against Israel. "AIPAC does not take positions on the Middle East and our policy is not to discuss publicly debates that are still being held. But we do believe that the United Nations, far from being an impartial or neutral mediator, is undermining the peace process with its recent recognition of the Palestinian government," said AIPAC spokeswoman Lori Rivlin. So no peace no recognition. Then why does the US President have to be dragged to Israel to do what was done to Erskine Childers or to President Wilson in 1919? Because a US Ambassador must be there to deliver - in the words of old-style diplomacy - some humble pie that can then be shoveled back into an American oven. Mr Sharon, an 80-year-old former paratroop commander who has declined to be interviewed by the BBC, is not talking quietly. He wants the US to do more than just vet the new Palestinian regime. There's plenty of proof he's campaigning for the White House to do more in
