Â· OpenLogicÂ· Synergistic interaction between the metabotropic glutamate receptor antagonist 2-amino-4-phosphonobutanoate and the protein kinase C inhibitor PK 11195 in a model of kainate-induced epilepsy in the rat.
We evaluated the effects of systemic administration of the mGluR1 receptor antagonist 2-amino-4-phosphonobutanoate (L-AP4) combined with the protein kinase C inhibitor PK 11195 in the kainate-induced epileptic model in rats. Combination treatments enhanced the anticonvulsant activity of both drugs alone. The administration of L-AP4 30 min before administration of the excitotoxin reduced the maximal electroshock seizure threshold to kainate, whereas it left unaltered the anticonvulsant effects of PK 11195. The combined administration of L-AP4 and PK 11195 30 min before kainate decreased the maximal electroshock seizure threshold; this pre-treatment did not alter the anticonvulsant action of either drug alone. Moreover, the present data show that in contrast to the effects of L-AP4 alone, the anticonvulsant activity of L-AP4/PK 11195 combinations was reversed by the muscarinic cholinergic receptor antagonist scopolamine. This finding suggests that a muscarinic mechanism is involved in the anticonvulsant effects of the combinations investigated. PK
