During the growing season, many farmers will need to need to pull weeds from their fields. This is not a time-consuming task since the weeds can be pulled by hand. Also, large tractors are not typically used to make the process more efficient. Because of this, farmers have to rely on smaller tractors or all-terrain vehicles to move weeds into piles near or across the road from where the tractor can reach. The area of operation, along with the distance from the tractor, is so large that the weeds have enough time to grow before the tractor comes back to get them. To help the farmers reduce the amount of tractor time needed to clean their fields, weed clearing equipment was invented. Most of these devices can pull weeds from the ground and rake them into piles. These devices are not suitable for pulling some weeds, such as skunk weed and poison ivy, because they have sharp thorns that can harm the operator. Weed clearing equipment has also had some problems being adapted to remove weeds up to the height of the trees in the field. The weed-pulling equipment in the prior art has not been able to pull weeds to a height of six feet or more. In addition, the weed clearing equipment in the prior art can be too large and cumbersome to be pulled by a small tractor or ATV. Also, many prior art weed clearing equipment are not able to pull weeds that are close together. The weeds have to be at least twenty feet away from each other in order for the equipment to pull them apart. The weed clearing equipment in the prior art has also been noisy and loud during operation, which can make them more dangerous for the operator. Also, prior art weed clearing equipment has a hard time filtering out certain types of weeds, such as the weeds that grow under the grass. The weeds tend to blow around so the equipment can't easily filter them out. A group of Japanese businessmen who illegally trapped and killed dozens of dolphins has been sentenced to 40 days in prison. On Monday, the dolphin slaughter group was sentenced to 40 days in prison after pleading guilty to two charges of animal abuse. The four men were fined ¥1.2 million and have been ordered to pay for the cost of their dolphin-eating trips. Despite the hefty penalties, the group says it plans to appeal. Dolphin is not listed on the menu at this particular restaurant, although it's sometimes served. Translated to English, it is stated on the menu:

What's New In Photoshop 2020?

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a phase-change recording layer having a crystalline state and an amorphous state with an excellent recording sensitivity and a recording medium containing the recording layer, which has an optical property suitable for a high-density recording signal. 2. Description of the Prior Art As the phase-change recording medium, a chalcogenide material such as a sulfide material, a selenide material, and a telluride material is used. As the chalcogenide material, first, an alloy of a GeTe-Sb.sub.2 Te.sub.3 system, an InTe-Sb.sub.2 Te.sub.3 system, an InSb-Te system, and the like has been known. Recently, as the recording material, there is being developed a recording medium having a phase-change recording layer obtained by coating a thin film of the chalcogenide material. As the phase-change recording medium is necessary that a new high-density recording can be made, it is essential for the chalcogenide material that an amorphous state and a crystalline state are given enough stability by cooling and heating to have an excellent recording sensitivity. It is very difficult to stably reproduce an amorphous state and a crystalline state, and there is a problem that satisfactory sensitivity cannot be obtained under a predetermined condition. Further, as the resistance of the chalcogenide material is low, there is a problem that the material is heated to a temperature higher than necessary for the recording with a laser beam by the heat generated in the medium and the recording is adversely affected. For example, it is necessary for a phase-change recording medium to provide a characteristic such that the recording sensitivity is not changed before the recording and to have a large difference in reflectivity between an amorphous state and a crystalline state. In order to satisfy these requirements, it is essential that an amorphous state and a crystalline state are stably reproduced. However, because of a problem in the stably reproduction of amorphous and crystalline states in the phase-change recording medium, it is not impossible to obtain a high-density recording of a binary type, and it is difficult to provide a medium having a higher density than the conventional medium. The chalcogenide material requires a high speed recording and an excellent response, and it is required to have a
