A 3D numerical model of the mouse forebrain-midbrain boundary (FMB) was constructed based on a combination of whole-mount immunostaining of embryonic mouse brain and preliminary 3D imaging. The spatial positions of five FMB-related markers in the outer-most subplate and the ventricular zone were defined to establish the basis of the numerical analysis. The magnitudes and orientations of growth and division of the neuroblasts in the upper and lower levels of the germinal matrix (GM) were estimated to give quantitative
