Project ProjectFile Task Task ProjectFile is a child of Project and Task is a child of Task I am using this code to find a Task but it always returns a null parent (this is what m_parent is). string projectID = 1234; var model = m_context.Projects .Select("projects.PROJ_ID=" + projectID).SingleOrDefault(); var task = model.Task .Where(t => t.PROJ_ID == projectID) .SingleOrDefault(); // I expect this to work but it doesn't. this.m_parent = task.Task; Any ideas how I could fix this. The data is retrieved from the DB and converted to the hierarchy. A: Maybe your ProjectFile entity has a null parent? var task = model.Task .Where(t => t.PROJ_ID == projectID) .SingleOrDefault(); In this case the first expression would return a ProjectFile, which

For example: 1) if I click the button, I would like to modify the 3 objects in the page to have a new price. 2) If I click the button again I would like to modify the 3 objects in the page to have the same price and also set the price to 0 (default). 3) Now I would like to select the 3 objects in the page and click the button "apply" to get the "selected objects with new price". 4) Now if I click the button "apply" again, the 3 selected objects with new price should be selected and set to 0. 5) Now I would like to select the 3 objects in the page and click the button "apply" to get the "selected objects with new price". Basically I would like to have a button which can modify multiple objects on the page (eg. 3 columns of products, each column can be either buy or sell and I can change the price of the items in each column). Thanks, Serhii Serhii, I would think that someone already has a solution to this, but maybe I just don't know how to google it? I would think that someone already has a solution to this, but maybe I just don't know how to google it? Sorry to be "delusive" but I have a feeling I've already been there and found a solution. I am not sure what is being done to the objects on the page if you add a JavaScript object. I was thinking of something like the way you select multiple files in Windows Explorer, right click the files and select "copy". It copies the file, selects them all and gives you the option to "copy selected" or to copy them all but not select them. I am not sure
